Lessonbee Adaptive Online Health Education	9780578837062		Scene1>slide41 Description boxes for each part of the brain	View Link	The "Upper Brain" is not a technical term for a part of the brain. The publisher also states that the Upper Brain is also known as the Cerebral Cortex. The cerebral cortex is actually the whole outer layer of the cerebrum, and it is divided into 4 lobes, one of which is the frontal cortex, which is covered by the Prefrontal Cortex. The publisher lists the Prefrontal Cortex as a separate part of the brain from the Cerebral Cortex, which isn't accurate. Also, it is actually the Prefrontal Cortex that allows a person to think logically and problem solve. I think this brain image and description needs editing.	Thank you. The brain image will be re-created to include frontal lobe, motor cortex, sensory cortex, parietal lobe, occipital lobe, and temporal lobe. We will include this language: "The prefrontal cortex, a part of the brain located at the front of the frontal lobe, is responsible for logical thinking and complex decision making."
Lessonbee Adaptive Online Health Education	9780578837062		1.21 narrative	View Link	Heimlich should be capitalized because it's a person's name.	Revised text: Jenny's mom: "These are the steps to the choking rescue, also called the Heimlich maneuver,"
Lessonbee Adaptive Online Health Education	9780578837062		scene 3 slide 1	View Link	A question in the text repeats twice and the conversation answers the question without showing what was the suggestion because the text bubble is the question repeated.	Thank you for noting. Yes, on Slide 3.1, the character Scott's question repeats. Instead of the question repeating, Scott's line should be: Scott: Okay...I can understand that. But, let's set a date for when you'll post again, okay? Don't let those people kill your dream.
Lessonbee Adaptive Online Health Education	9780578837062		1.27 Feedback	View Link	Misspelled hitting	Thank you, we will correct and spell 'hitting' correctly
Lessonbee Adaptive Online Health Education	9780578837062		1.8 Fight or Flight 3 from the navigation menu Text boxes	View Link	The publisher defines Eustress as something (anything) that allows you to act quickly, even if it's a negative event. They define Distress as something that lasts too long or isn't real. These are not accurate definitions of either type of stress.	Delete the phrase, "This is called eustress." Edit 2nd text box to be: "If your stress lasts too long or you stress over something that has not yet happened, this could negatively impact your physical and mental health. This stress can make you feel drained or exhausted. It is important to know how to manage your stress."

Lessonbee Adaptive Online Health Education	9780578837062		scene 1 slide 43 Response to T/F question	View Link	Q: T/F: Teenagers are typically more emotional, so their decisions are made too quickly without consideration of the consequences. The publishers reason for this question being False states: "While the brain is certainly going through a lot of change during adolescence, this doesn't mean that a teenager is unable to make rational decisions. Reasoning and critical thinking skills don't vanish in times of change, even when emotions are running high." This may be technically accurate, however, this question is really neither true or false. Or more accurately, it is BOTH true AND false. A teenager is typically more emotional, and they are less likely to make rational decisions because the prefrontal cortex is not fully developed. Reasoning and critical thinking skills don't "vanish" - that is correct, but they are less accessible when emotions are high AND those skills are not fully accessible to the teenage brain to begin with. https://www.aacap.org/AACAP/Families_and_Youth/Facts_for_Families/FFF-Guide/The-Teen-Brain-Behavior-Problem-Solving-and-Decision-Making-095.aspx	Thank you, we will revise the question so that it's not T/F and is instead a free response question: "What is happening in the adolescent brain that causes teenagers to be more emotional, on average, than adults?"

Quaver Health Online License	9781642851427	0M11-3.3	Title	View Link	The title of activity for "Traveling" is misleading to the student. When talking about a "hand-dribble" and demonstrating a basketball type skills, the word "traveling" indicates that the student will be dribbling and picking up the ball, which is contraindicated for what type of skill we would want to teach in order to make a transfer into small games/sport activities.
